AZALEAS

These gorgeous flowering shrubs make our southern gardens a riot of color from December to April. They are planted in the smallest plots and on large estates where their immense masses of bloom create such pictures that visitors come from thousands of miles to see them. From central Florida to Norfolk, Virginia, and along the Gulf Coast west to Texas, Azaleas are the glory of the South.

These popular evergreen shrubs can be used in almost any location where other dwarf evergreens can be planted. Transplanting may be safely done at any time of the year. Their cultural needs are few, provided certain fundamental requirements are met.

Plant at the same depth as in the nursery. Planting too deep is certain to result in failure. The soil must be rich in humus and of the proper acidity. Do not cultivate too deep.

We will be glad to furnish you with a booklet dealing with the planting, care and cultivation of Azaleas and Camellias. It is yours for the asking.

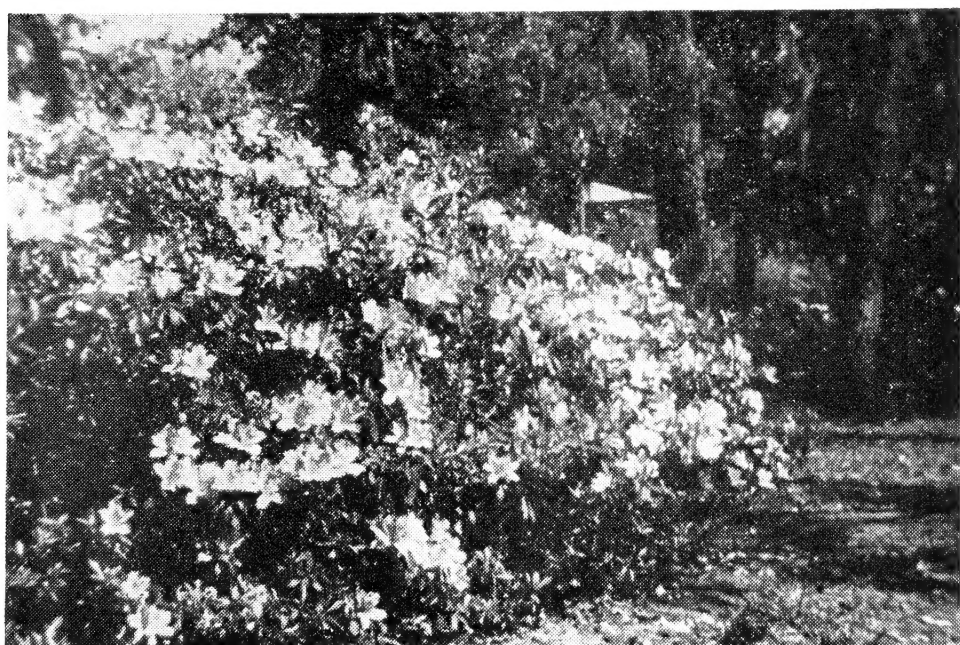

We are in position to supply you with unusually fine plants this season—young, properly pruned, well grown in every way and as you notice, most reasonably priced.

Please do not confuse our Azaleas with thinly grown plants, which may have the height but are not well branched and do not have the proper vitality. Our plants have been spaced, grown under irrigation and have had the necessary care.

We have thousands of young thrifty plants ready to be transplanted to your garden, where you may enjoy them with a minimum of care.

For those of you who prefer ordering by variety we are listing the varieties of Azaleas we grow. Both in the larger flowering "Indicas" and in the dainty pastel colored "Kurumes."

On orders for shipment please add 10 percent to the list price to cover packing charges, except on Hemerocallis.

HIBISCUS

You can bring the beauty and glamor of the tropics to your garden by planting Hibiscus. Inexpensive and easy to grow, these remarkable plants will add new beauty to your garden, which you may not have thought possible before.

Hibiscus blooms almost continuously from early spring to fall, producing an unbelievable number of flowers per plant. You may choose varieties with dainty flowers only 2 inches across or types with gigantic blossoms of 8 or 9 inches. Your preference may be for single, semi-double or double varieties in colors from the purest silvery white to the deepest maroon-red, yellows or shades of orange with all intermediate pastel tints and combinations of colors.

Hibiscus blooms are excellent for cutting, some will last as long as twelve hours, and, believe it or not, they do not have to be kept in water to remain fresh.

Being tropical in origin, Hibiscus are somewhat tender, but you can grow them in your southern garden if these rules are followed:

Plant in well-drained soil only, in a sunny, protected location.

Do not fertilize during late summer or fall.

Protect during cold weather.

Hibiscus plants are such vigorous growers that even if injured by cold, they are ready to produce their gorgeous tropical flowers again within a few weeks. If your climatic or soil conditions are such that they cannot be planted in the open ground, they may be grown in containers that can be moved to a protected location during cold weather.

Our Hibiscus may be transplanted at any time. Just slip the container from around the roots and set out the plant in its permanent location. No cutting back is necessary and no time is lost, so you may enjoy these tropical gems without delay.

HEMEROCALLIS

"Beauty of the Day"

Years ago we became interested in Daylilies. In those days very few outstanding commercial varieties were available, but even so, they proved to us that Hemerocallis were the ideal perennials for Southern conditions. Since that time hundreds of new varieties have been created, and today Hemerocallis are among the most popular perennials in America.

Imagine plants that will grow and thrive with a minimum of care, in either sun or partial shade, that the not subject to plant pests and diseases and therefore require no spraying, that will grow in dry or moist soil and are satisfactory from Florida to Maine! They are ideal in the annual or perennial border with a background of higher shrubs, in dull spots in foundation plantings, in the cutting garden or for naturalizing. They are the busy gardener's answer to a prayer for more color.

The killing frost experienced in November 1950, more than ever proved the value of these plants. Thousands of other plants were killed or injured, but not Daylilies, No damage. Beautiful beyond words again in the Spring and Summer.

We do not attempt to list all the varieties on the market today. For that matter, we do not believe that anyone offers all of hem. However, by continually testing promising new varieties, we are eliminating those types that prove to be not at home under our climatic conditions.

We are so "sold" on these plants that we want you to enjoy them with us in your own Garden.

Just look at our "Special Offer." Thirteen of the Finest varieties, currently selling for as much as $1.25 per plant. Here is your chance to really start a prize collection.

Don't have a Dull Garden . . . Use DAYLILIES

DAYLILIES in the South may be transplanted at any time. Doing the job during late summer or fall assures you, however, that the plants will become well established before winter and give maximum results the first blooming season. Planting should be at the same depth the plants grew in the nursery. A liberal amount of humus or similar decayed vegetable matter added to the soil is advisable. Two applications of a high-grade commercial fertilizer during the growing season will keep the plants in vigorous condition. Never try to push them too much. Keep well watered until thoroughly established during hot, dry periods. For best results planting should be in sunny or at least partially sunny locations.
